A health and well-being reference for WA JMOs

Junior Doctor Health and Well-Being

It is well known that your intern and Resident Medical Officer years are an intense, challenging and frequently stressful time that will test you both clinically and personally.

If you or a colleague are finding things overwhelming or are experiencing any difficulties in your personal or professional life, help and support is available. The key message is to talk to someone about it and remember that you are not alone.

A good junior doctor is one that knows how and when to ask for help.

Need Help?

Help is available. There are support services both within your hospital and externally to assist anyone who is in need of support or advice.

Talk to someone. When you need help, you just need to ask for it. Talk to your family, friends, colleagues, GP, registrars, supervisors, Directors of Clinical Training, Medical Education Officer – there are many people who you can talk about any difficulties you are experiencing.

GP

Doctors need doctors. All junior doctors are encouraged to have their own personal GP. A GP will be able to provide you with holistic and objective advice and care. If you do not have a GP, get a recommendation from a friend, family member or colleague. Alternatively you can ask a local pharmacist, search online or contact the Doctors' Health Advisory Service.

Doctors' Health Advisory Service

If you want to talk to someone anonymously the Doctors' Health Advisory Service is an independent, confidential, 24-hour service staffed by experienced doctors for doctors in crisis, or those who are not sure where to go for help. Calls can be made anonymously by the person themselves, a family member, colleague or friend.

Phone: (08) 9231 3098 (available 24/7)

Further information available at:

www.adhn.org.au/contact/western-australia

Employee Assistance Program

A free, professional and completely confidential counselling service is provided for public sector employees, either over the telephone or in person, and is available 24/7. Employees and immediate family members can receive three counselling sessions for any issue where counselling is required. Employers do not find out who accesses this service.
